

Infant Toddler Super Saturday: Language and Interaction

Literacy Walk-Let's bring out the talk!

Featuring Jane Hyché

Sharing books and introducing infants and toddlers to early literacy concepts is wonderful, but you can't say you're walking the walk without talking the talk! Children need our voices to help them in finding their own! Come join this session to learn about intentional techniques and practices that help develop language in our youngest learners.

BABY TALK: Send Me A Sign

Featuring Anissa Williams

Professional Learners and Childcare Providers will come to understand how baby sign language is defined, when it should be taught, effectiveness of using sign language with hearing children and view the reported pros and cons of using sign language with children. Learners will practice/learn sign language to communicate with the children in their care.

Interaction = Verbal Action!

Featuring Renee Gudermuth

Talking means learning, building knowledge and intelligence. Daily conversations and play times shape children's learning before kindergarten and into school. Educators give children an edge by having language-rich interactions to develop strong language skills and brains to support learning. Participants will learn through hands on activities how they can help infants and toddlers learn about sounds and build their first words more effectively.
